Cookie Policy

We take your privacy seriously and only use cookies to ensure you get the best possible experience from our websites.

What are cookies?

Cookies are text files containing small amounts of information which are downloaded to a device when you visit one of our websites or click one of our adverts on the internet.

Why do we use cookies?

Cookies are useful for many reasons. For example, they help us build the content and layout of our websites by recognising how visitors use them.

They can recognise devices that have been used to visit previously and can remember your preference settings. For example, they enable personalised experiences such remembering log-in details.

Some cookies are essential and enable you to move around our websites and use their features. Other cookies are used to show visits from our registered business partners and customers and help us better provide the information they are looking for.

We firmly believe the information cookies provide help us improve your experience when visiting our websites. We also think you should know what cookies we use and how we use them:
